Digital Safety Reminder: Phishing Emails

Industries and businesses of all types have been experiencing an increase in phishing emails in recent years, and schools are no exception. Phishing emails are fraudulent messages designed to look like they come from a trusted source that request sensitive, personal information or try to get users to download malicious software. Due to how widespread phishing attempts are becoming, everyone in today's digital world should be cautious and look for signs of suspicious activity, such as unexpected requests, unfamiliar senders or links that don't match their source.

Here are some general tips that might be helpful:

- Verify the Sender: Examine the sender's email address for slight misspellings (e.g., micros0ft.com instead of microsoft.com) or the use of generic public domains (like @gmail.com) for a major company.
- Hover Over Links: Before clicking a link, hover your mouse pointer over it to see the actual destination URL that appears in the corner of your browser. If it doesn't match the link text or seems unfamiliar, don't click it.
- Verify Requests Directly: If an email from a known person or company seems suspicious (e.g., an unusual invoice or a request for a payment change), contact them through a separate, known communication method (e.g., a trusted phone number or a new email thread) to confirm the request is legitimate. Do not use the contact information provided in the suspicious email.

Report and Delete: Report any phishing attempts to your IT department (if at work), email provider, or authorities like the FTC, then delete the message. Do not reply or use the unsubscribe link, as this confirms your email is active.
